Before You Shoot

- Identify a subject or theme that tells a story.
- Scout locations that enhance the narrative you want to convey.
- Plan your shots by considering the mood and emotional impact.
- Gather a list of potential elements (props, people, settings) to include in your shots.
- Ensure your camera is set to either aperture priority or shutter priority mode with ISO 200 fixed.

Assignment Tasks

1. Photograph a scene that tells a story about a local event, using aperture priority mode at f/5.6 with ISO 200 fixed.
2. Capture a portrait of someone engaged in an activity that reflects their personality, using shutter priority mode at 1/125s with ISO 200 fixed.
3. Create a series of three images that together tell a cohesive story about a day in the life of a local artisan, using aperture priority mode at f/3.5.
4. Document a family gathering, focusing on interaction and emotions, using shutter priority mode at 1/500s with ISO 200 fixed.
5. Take a photo that embodies a specific mood (e.g., joy, nostalgia) by carefully considering lighting and composition, using aperture priority mode at f/2.8.
6. Photograph a solitary figure in a public space to convey a sense of isolation, using shutter priority mode at 1/60s with ISO 200 fixed.

Stretch Tasks

- Create a photo essay consisting of 5 images that narrate a personal story or experience, using various techniques learned in this assignment.
- Experiment with low-light storytelling by capturing images at dusk or dawn, utilizing aperture priority mode to achieve desired exposure.

DO / DON'T

DO

- ✓ Do take time to understand the emotional context of your subjects before shooting.
- ✓ Do use composition techniques that enhance the narrative of your photographs.
- ✓ Do experiment with different lighting conditions to evoke various moods.
- ✓ Do engage with your subjects to capture authentic moments.
- ✓ Do review your images after shooting to analyze how well they convey your intended story.

DON'T

- ✗ Don't rely solely on post-processing to fix poorly composed images.
- ✗ Don't ignore the emotional aspect of your subjects; aim to capture genuine interactions.
- ✗ Don't be afraid to move around your subject to find the best angle for storytelling.
- ✗ Don't use overly complex setups that distract from the narrative you want to convey.
- ✗ Don't forget to check your settings before starting to shoot; ensure you are using the correct priority mode.

Reflection Questions

- What emotions did you aim to convey in your chosen narrative and how did your images reflect that?
- How did your choice of lighting and composition impact the storytelling in your photographs?
- What challenges did you face in capturing a narrative and how did you overcome them?
- In what ways did engaging with your subjects enhance the storytelling aspect of your images?

Technical & Creative Focus

Technical:

- Use aperture priority mode at f/4 to create a balanced depth of field while allowing the camera to adjust shutter speed.
- Utilize shutter priority mode at 1/250s to capture movement in your narrative shots.
- Experiment with different focal lengths to see how they affect the storytelling aspect.
- Pay attention to the direction and quality of light in your scenes.
- Consider using backlighting to create dramatic effects that enhance the story.

Creative:

- Capture candid moments that reveal emotions and interactions.
- Frame your subjects in a way that guides the viewer's eye through the story.
- Incorporate leading lines in your composition to draw attention to the main subject.
- Use negative space strategically to emphasize your story.
- Experiment with different perspectives and angles to find the most compelling view.
